

Daryl,

I think that allowing ATV's, UTV's and OHV's to use public roads is a bad idea. You cite these two individuals as being experts in the field. How about you think about not using someone who sells the vehicles who want to use the roads (and probably increase the sales) but rather someone who drives a lot of miles and may well have encountered ATV's and other OHV's illegally on public roads? You are setting the stage for even more potential for fatalities, illegal trespassing, and other related problems associated with the misguided mindset of ATV and OHV riders that they may go where ever they choose because they own a vehicle that is able. As a rural land owner, I will fight vehemently to catch and prosecute all trespassers on OHV's to the fullest extent of the law. If they die on public roads, law makers such as you may well have to shoulder a major portion of that responsibility. It is a BAD ideal. Sincerely, al deal
